Paris Styles

By MARY FENTRESS

PARIS. (U.P.)—Now that the smart crowd has returned to town, Paris is a riot of color. The autumn foliage in parks and gardens is matched by the bright shades of coats and suits. For the first time in many seasons the conventional Parisian black and white is not being adhered to as strictly as in former years.

The Bois de Boulogne is the most popular place for the morning walk. Smart women, attired in tweeds and woollens in russet, burgundy and soft green shades, are seen there. Suits with straight skirts and hip-length loose jackets are a popular choice, as are suits with extremely full fingertip coats. Bright felt hats, usually peaked and trimmed with a quill, match stock scarves, gloves and purses which are in a contrasting color. The reds are popular for evening wear, too. At the gala performance of Sacha Guitry's new play, "La Fin du Monde," russets, crimsons and wines were outstanding in the audience. Several of the dark red satins were cut with high necks in front and were squared low in back.

Many women seem to have adopted the low V-neck decollete which has been revived by several houses this season. Most popular of all are the draped gowns of Grecian influence. In this category was one of deep red satin trimmed in sapphire blue.

TODAY'S FASHION TIP
Traditional black and white has been supplanted by bright autumnal colors for sports, with red tones outstanding.
